USER 1

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most?
I'm a 28-year-old marketing analyst working in the fintech industry. I'm more of an evening person, so I enjoy the time mostly from evening into the night.

2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.) How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
I like drinking smoothies, all types of smoothies. Also, when I listen to music, I feel energized. I spend about 150€ per month on smoothies.

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
I don't take any powders, but I do take melatonin to help me fall asleep better. I also have a skincare routine.

- What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)
  I like the taste of the products, but I wish I could see a more obvious effect from them, similar to how you can see results with skincare.
- And what frustrates you?
  Sometimes I forget to buy more, and I also don't see a direct effect whether I keep using them or not.
- Do you feel like the products you use are designed with women's needs in mind?
- Yes but more from a psychological perspective.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  I spend about €20 per month, and for skincare products I spend around €100 per quarter (3 months).
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, I have. More from a psychological perspective, I didn't notice a difference if I stopped, so I let it go.

4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It should look very fancy and taste fruity, with a bit of sourness, that would be perfect. By taking it, I'd want to feel emotionally empowered and physically not hungry anymore, but satisfied.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In the afternoons, because that's always the time I feel tired.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, I would recommend it, because very niche products that support women's inner peace and outer energy are rare.

USER 2

1. Q: Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
   I'm a start up founder. I usually get up whenever I feel like, no alarm clocks ;) (if possible). Then I scroll a bit on my phone and get up for a coffee and breakfast. I work during the day and go to bed when I feel like it.
2. Q: Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.) How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
   Coffee, because I love the taste. If I don't drink coffee, I feel moody and get a headache. Sometimes I also drink a smoothie, and I'll have matcha every now and then.
   About 100 euro
3. Q: Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
   Yes! I take dissolvable vitamin tablets, pills for collagen and hair, and sometimes a smoothie.
4. Q: What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)
   I like that they're functional and seem to work.
5. Q: And what frustrates you?
   I often forget to take them in the morning. If I'm out all day I'm not sure whether I should take them in the evening or if that would be too much when I take them again the next morning. Also, I hate the way they look and taste. Sometimes the pills get stuck in my throat, when I'm in a hurry, I swallow them without enough water and then they're stuck on the whole subway ride. It's just gross!
6. Q: Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
   Not really. I feel most products are too medical, they look like medication. Powders and pills especially look like that.
7. Q: On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
   Around €30 per month, plus about €100 per month for skincare.
8. Q: Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
   Yes. I usually forget to take things daily. Once I bought collagen powder, it was expensive and horrible. I had to puke a couple of times, and the few times I didn't, I burped the whole day with that disgusting taste. In the end I threw it away.
9. Q: If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
   I want something that's actually tasty, something I enjoy every day. Not like "taking" something, but integrated in my life so it feels natural and fun. It should be something I look forward to, like a daily treat. It should give me energy, nutrition, and a bit of magic, make me feel emotionally uplifted and physically supported.
10. Q: Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  Mostly in the mornings when I commute to work. Sometimes I don't have time for breakfast, so I'd want something I can have on the subway or bus that keeps me going until I can take a proper break.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, definitely. If it's tasty.

USER 3

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
The moment I enjoy most every day is my morning coffee. Brewing a cup, sitting down for a short break, it feels really comfortable.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
Yes, I usually drink some protein powder, basically protein drinks after workouts, sometimes also eggs.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, I usually drink some protein powder , basically protein drinks after workouts." (same as above)

Q4. What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)
In terms of taste, I like sweet-and-sour flavors, something refreshing, best with a bit of lemon."
Most importantly, it should bring me a sense of happiness, a feeling of joy and positivity.

Q5. And what frustrates you?
-

Q6. Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
-

Q7. On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
Around 30 euros a month.

Q8. Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
-

Q9. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Taste: I like sweet-and-sour flavors, something refreshing , best with some lemon.
Feeling: "It should give me a sense of happiness , a joyful, pleasant feeling."
Packaging: "I don't have too many requirements for appearance, but it should be easy to use. Ideally it would be recyclable, and better not plastic , maybe glass bottles would be nicer."

Q10. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?

Maybe I'd drink it in the morning after waking up, or after dinner in the evening before going to bed.

B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
If I really enjoy it and feel happy drinking it, I'd definitely recommend it to friends. If it could also make my skin better, then I'd want to share it with others. Wouldn't it be great if everyone could feel better together?

USER 4

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Shutting down the computer after work, lying down, and scrolling on the phone.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
The first cup of coffee in the morning.

30 euro per month

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
No.

Q3.1 What do you like about them?
Doesn't apply, since not taking any supplements.

Q3.2 And what frustrates you?
Same as above.

Q3.3 Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
There are a series of women's nutritional supplements, but I don't know much about them.

Q3.4 On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
0 EUR.

Q3.5 Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
A long time ago I bought vitamins from dm (a German drugstore), but since there was no obvious effect, I gradually forgot to take them.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
A "healthier version of milk tea," but the key is that it must taste good.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In the morning.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, if it really works.

✨ Core insights from User A:

- Habits: Morning coffee is an essential ritual; evenings are for unwinding.
- Supplements: Doesn’t currently use; past experiences showed little to no effect.
- Expectations: Taste comes first : a product should be enjoyable like milk tea.
- Use case: Morning consumption.
- Recommendation driver: Only if it has visible, effective results.

USER 5

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
My typical day starts with a green tea … then I drink a glass of water with lemon. I usually listen to music in the morning to get excited for the day. That gives me energy and I'm always happy when I have my music. Otherwise, I always do my makeup and my skincare routine.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
Green tea with honey, water with lemon, and listening to music in the morning.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
-

- What do you like about them?
  N/A
- And what frustrates you?
  N/A
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  N/A
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  N/A
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  N/A

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
A product that tastes sweet, makes you feel fit, and gives you beautiful skin and hair would be amazing. I'd drink that all day long. Ideally, it would look pink and taste like berries or coconut.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  (Not explicitly mentioned, but from context: mornings with tea/water and beauty rituals would be the natural fit.)
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Of course I'd recommend it to my friends or family. If necessary, I'd even sell it.

USER 6

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
It depends on my state. When I used to wake up early consistently, I looked forward to reading my favorite novels right after getting up, no need to think about anything, no pressure. Now, I probably look forward most to having coffee during my afternoon break.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
Morning and afternoon coffee/fruit, lying down for a nap after meals, lighting incense, taking a shower, and listening to lofi music.

25 EUR/month

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Vitamin D, Omega-3, Vitamin C effervescent tablets, and gummy vitamins.

- Q3.1 What do you like about them?
  I like the idea of supplemens for wellness. I enjoy the grapefruit flavor of the effervescent tablets, they taste good, are convenient, and not expensive.
- Q3.2 And what frustrates you?
  Omega-3 capsules are too big, they're really hard to swallow.
- Q3.3 Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Probably, but I'm not really sure.
- Q3.4 On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Around 10 euros, because I don't take them regularly. Sometimes I take them, sometimes I don't.
- Q3.5 Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Not yet.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It definitely has to taste good, otherwise it's hard to stick with. And it must have proper certifications. I don't really accept weird or unverified supplements.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In the afternoon.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  I'd have to try it first before recommending it.

USER 7

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
My first cup of coffee in the morning, then going to the bathroom.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
Same as above , my first cup of coffee in the morning. Without it, I feel like a walking corpse.

35 EUR per month

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Fish oil, vitamins, calcium-magnesium complex.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It could be either tablets or powders, ideally covering everything in one go. The taste should be very light , slightly sweet or slightly salty is fine, otherwise it's easy to get tired of. Ideally, it should feel like drinking a glass of lightly salted water.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  After morning coffee.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, if I can feel the effect, I'd recommend it to friends.

USER 8

用户D Responses (English)

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most?
After work.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
Breakfast.

5 EUR

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
No.

- Q3.1 What do you like about them?
  I don't like them, so I don't take them.
- Q3.2 And what frustrates you?
  Work.
- Q3.3 Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Overall, yes.
- Q3.4 On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  -
- Q3.5 Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Can't think of anything right now.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
A mouth spray, with a fresh fruity flavor, simple and elegant design, refreshing feeling.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  Right after waking up in the morning or before going to bed at night.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes. If it's something good, it should be shared with everyone.

USER 9

用户E Responses (English)

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Coffee.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
Coffee, going to the bakery, and buying flowers.

Around 20 euros for drink rituals

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
No.

- Q3.1 What do you like about them?
  Nothing.
- Q3.2 And what frustrates you?
  I don't really know why I should take supplements.
- Q3.3 Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  More or less. Basically, my needs are met.
- Q3.4 On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  -
- Q3.5 Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  I couldn't keep it up.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Appearance: simple, green.
Feeling: fresh, no burden, appetite-suppressing.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In the morning.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  If it's good, I would.

USER 10

用户F Responses (English)

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
The most enjoyable and anticipated moment of my day is usually at night, after I've finished all my tasks, brushed my teeth, tidied up the house, and finally lie down in a clean bed to rest, but before I actually fall asleep. Around 9 or 10 p.m. is when I feel most relaxed.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
In the morning, I like drinking a cup of hot tea, which gives me more motivation to work.

30-50 EUR

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
I don't take supplements regularly, but sometimes I take vitamins that are said to be good for the eyes.

- Q3.1 What do you like about them?
  I like the effect. Since I use the computer for long hours every day, it makes me feel like my eyes are being protected, at least psychologically.
- Q3.2 And what frustrates you?
  The biggest issue is that I often forget to take them. What I really need is a pill box with seven compartments for the week, to remind me not to forget.
- Q3.3 Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Hard to say. For example, even with something as basic as sanitary pads, something every woman needs, many still aren't well-designed in terms of leakage prevention. This makes me doubt whether many products on the market really consider women's needs.
- Q3.4 On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  If I include face masks and other skincare products, I'd say around 50 euros per month.
- Q3.5 Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, such as eye vitamins or other supplements. The reason is that I often forget to take them, so there's no continuity, and I felt the effect wasn't good.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
I remember a brand once launched a product marketed as "one bottle equals one meal." I thought the concept was great because it saves time, but I doubted its actual health benefits, so I didn't dare drink it long-term. Also, the texture was thick and too sweet, which didn't suit my taste. If I were to design my own, I'd want something that truly saves time, is genuinely beneficial for health, and makes you feel refreshed, not like you just consumed a sugary drink.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In the morning after waking up, as part of breakfast.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, especially to friends who often need to work outside, do interpreting, or freelance. A small drink like this could provide energy, be healthy, and save time, which would be very useful.

USER 11

用户G Responses (English)

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most?
The moment I most look forward to every day is in the afternoon when I get off work and head home.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
I'm used to making myself a cup of tea after I get home.

About 30 EUR

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
I'm currently taking Ashwagandha. Sometimes, when work stress is high, I take it before bed because it helps me sleep.

- Q3.1 What do you like about them?
  I like its function - it works.
- Q3.2 And what frustrates you?
  The taste isn't great.
- Q3.3 Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  I think in Denmark, the market for female-focused supplements and nutrition products is actually quite comprehensive.
- Q3.4 On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  About 200 DKK (28EUR) per month on functional supplements.
- Q3.5 Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, I once bought Japanese women's vitamin packs. Each pack contained different vitamins in small bags. I stopped using them because taking single pills every day felt boring, so I often forgot and eventually gave up.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
I'd like the product to be portable and have some kind of built-in reminder, so I wouldn't easily forget to take it. In terms of taste, I'd prefer fruity or milk-tea flavors. Ideally, it should feel enjoyable to drink, like having a little treat, but also give me a sense of healthiness.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
I think the best time would be in the morning after waking up, because it gives a sense of health and vitality. I would also recommend it to my friends.

USER 12

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
I am naturally a night owl personality. I find myself most efficient, creative, and productive at night, from 11 pm to 6 am. I usually look forward to the sunset.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
I usually listen to music when I tidy up my room every day (or every other day when I am busy with school/work). Tidying up gives me a sense of clarity, and listening to music boosts my energy. My other hobbies include taking care of pets, doing arts and crafts, and taking a walk outside.
Every Sunday morning, I go to the farmer's market to buy a carrot juice from a specific booth, it's my weekly treat. I also drink Coke when working on energy-demanding tasks, such as writing important documents or creating large art pieces.
I spend on average 60 Dollars per month on the drinks.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes. Currently taking 2 pills of Olly "Ultra Strength Goodbye Stress Softgels" (Ashwagandha, GABA, L-Theanine, Lemon Balm Extract).

- What do you like about them?
  They are effective, but the softgels are relatively difficult to swallow. Sometimes it's even painful to take two at a time.
- And what frustrates you?
  The oral administration feels risky, and sometimes I fear the softgels will get stuck in my esophagus.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind? Why?
  I think so. The stress gels I take are effective for relieving anxiety in a non-prescription way, helping me focus without the drowsiness that comes from psychiatric medications. Olly also makes products specifically for women and men, though I haven't tried them yet.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  $19.99 for 60 softgels (a 30-day supply).
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes. I often find half-empty bottles of omega-3, collagen capsules, Vitamin D2, multivitamin gummies, melatonin gummies, and calcium softgels. The main reasons: I forget when busy, I don't see an obvious need to continue, or I bought them based on short-term social media trends that didn't turn into long-term habits.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
My favorite taste is carrot or carrot-apple juice, so I'd want my supplement to taste like that.

For example, dissolving a pack of vitamins, minerals, probiotics, collagen, L-theanine, ashwagandha, and caffeine into freshly made carrot juice, stirred and enjoyed with a straw. It would feel like a reward, healthy, guilt-free, mood-boosting, energizing, and helping me focus.

Q5. Now imagine Bossbaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  I'd like to buy one on my way home from work as a daily treat for finishing the day. It would also give me an energy boost to start my creative time in the evening or night. Right now, I drink Coke for that, but I'd prefer a healthier, equally rewarding substitute.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, because I like sharing helpful information with friends, especially if it can improve their health.

USER 13

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Depends on the day and what plans I have. I don't have a specific ritual except for sleep that I look forward to every day. But usually I'm happiest when I'm with my friends and eating good food.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
Pepsi Max. Listening to music I like while hyping myself up.

maybe 150-200 dkk (if you include Pepsi maybe 350 dkk haha)

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes: B12 and vegan Omega-3.

- What do you like about them?
  They make me feel healthier and more energized.
- And what frustrates you?
  I haven't noticed any female-oriented marketing.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Not really.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Around 100 DKK.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes , for example, lactose for gut health. I stopped when I didn't have enough money or felt it didn't work.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
My wellness product wouldn't necessarily be something you can taste, but more like something you can feel , like a warm cloth on my eyes, or an aromatic shower/bath.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  If I saw research that pointed to good, peer-reviewed effects. The timing of day wouldn't matter.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  It really depends on the product and its effects, not the marketing.

USER 14

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Relaxing in bed.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
At least one "fun drink," like Coke, matcha, or an energy drink. And one "wellbeing drink," like peppermint tea or coconut water.
About 150 €

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
No.

- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  No, design and effects are often targeted at men. Women's needs and interests are less considered.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  About €10–20.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes , the price wasn't justified by the effect.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It would give an energy boost but still be calming and healthy for the body. The taste should not be too strong or too sweet.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In the morning on the way to work.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, if it has truly unique effects compared to other products and tastes good. Otherwise, it would only be interesting to try once.

USER 15

User J

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most?
The moment I enjoy most is right after work when I put down my bag, and also after washing up and lying in bed.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend per month on average on this?
Some time ago, I liked making myself a cocktail after work. Recently, I've been enjoying playing Nintendo Switch.

Around 20 euro

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Not currently, but I'm preparing to start fish oil capsules.

- What do you like about them?
  My doctor recommends eating salmon/tuna or taking fish oil capsules can supplement EPA and DHA.
- And what frustrates you?
  Nothing yet, since I haven't started. Haha.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Not sure.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Basically zero.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes , grape seed capsules. They were too big, hard to swallow, tasteless, and felt like taking medicine. If the capsule coating had been sweet, I might have continued taking them.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It should taste like lemon tea or grape-flavored Americano, and I'd like to drink it with ice cubes.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In the morning, together with breakfast.

- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, if it tastes good and is effective. Best friends should get beautiful together ;p

USER 16

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most?
When I come home after a long day and fall into bed. Or while getting ready.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
Matcha in the morning.
20€ per month

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes. Gummy supplements and oral nutrition supplements.

- Do you feel they are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Yes.
- What do you like about them?
  The taste is good.

Q4. What frustrates you about them?
I want them to work quickly.

Q5. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like?
(Not directly answered, but implication: tasty, effective, and fast-working.)

Q6. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  On long trips, when I can't get all my nutrients.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Depends on the effects.

USER 17

USER L Norway

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
My typical day starts at 7, where I sometimes work and sometimes only study. After that I go home and have dinner and usually talk to my friends or parents! I think the best part of the day is when I am social, at work, school, or after work.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
Haha I use "snus," which feels very good. Other than that, no unfortunately. I need to get a good habit asap!

50-70€ on drinks

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Unfortunately no :(

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Probably something that makes me feel energized and that looks pretty. I'm not all about coffee and heavy drinks, so an iced tea would be perfect (if it was a drink).

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
At work or at home in the morning.
B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
Of course! But my friends and I are easily influenced, if we see something fun, we'll buy it!

USER 18

In Moscow

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
When I occasionally manage to wake up early, tidy up, and drink a glass of warm water, I feel satisfied because there's still so much time left in the day. Also, in the evening after work, lying down and letting go of everything feels amazing.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
The first drink in the morning, usually a cleansing drink with a sour taste. It feels like all the molecules are melting in my mouth, leaving me refreshed, as if the new day will be healthy and fresh.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, a gut-cleansing powder (forgot the name) and fish oil.

- What do you like about them?
  The gut-cleansing powder tastes fresh and makes me feel like it clears away yesterday's heaviness. Fish oil seems to help, my eyes feel less dry (though maybe psychological).
- What frustrates you?
  Not much for now. They feel expensive when buying, but if I break it down, it's not that bad. If pricing were better explained (per use), I'd feel more motivated to buy.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Yes. I usually buy women-specific products, so I see a lot of information on women's health.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Estimated 500–1000 RMB per month.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  No, I keep using what I buy. Only inconvenience: fish oil capsules are hard to swallow. Powders are easier.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It should be a powder you can mix into water, like lemon water with a slightly sour taste. It should leave the mouth feeling fresh, giving the sense of a bright, beautiful summer morning and a fresh start.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) Morning would be the best time, because "the day starts in the morning." A refreshing drink in summer gives you a cheerful mood.

B) Yes, I'd recommend it to friends if it's refreshing and effective.

Q6. Beverage expenses
I drink quite a lot overall, though I'm trying to reduce spending. On average I spend about 50 RMB per day, which totals around 1500–2000 RMB per month (≈187–250 EUR).

USER 19

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
The part of my day I always look forward to is doing my makeup and getting ready in the morning.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
My first coffee (usually iced) always belongs to the start of my day.

On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
Around €40.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, Vitamin B and D capsules. A large pack costs about €15.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
(Not directly answered, but implied: should fit seamlessly into morning rituals and be energizing like coffee.)

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In my university routine, for example during breaks between lectures.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, I would recommend it to my girlfriends, since some of them also suffer from low energy during university life.

USER 20

用户O Responses (English)

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
What I look forward to most every day is coming home after work, seeing my boyfriend, and spending the evening with him.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
Yes , daily workouts and skincare. My monthly budget for this is about €65.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, calcium and collagen.

- What do you like about them?
  They're inexpensive and convenient.
- What frustrates you?
  There are too many products, each with a single function. I wish there were one product that could cover women's needs across different ages.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  I think so.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Within €65.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, mostly because I felt they were useless or ineffective, so I stopped.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Taste is very important, it should taste good! The appearance should be minimalist and elegant.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) I think drinking it on an empty stomach in the morning would be easiest to stick with.
B) If I felt it was effective, I would definitely recommend it.

USER 21

User P Responses (English)

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
After work, taking a shower, lying comfortably in bed, scrolling on my phone, and watching dramas, that's pure bliss.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
A glass of pure fruit juice in the morning (coffee makes my heart race, milk tea feels unhealthy).

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
No.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
The taste should be sweet-and-sour and refreshing. Packaging should be in a paper carton with a straw, no need to twist open a cap, super convenient. That way, drinking feels even happier. I'd love something I can just grab in the morning before work to start my day in a good mood.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) Morning, because drinking it then feels lighter on the body, better absorbed, and starting the day with something delicious makes work feel less unpleasant.
B) Yes, if it tastes good, it's worth sharing!

Q6. How much do you spend per month on drinks?
About 300 RMB (~€38), mostly on milk tea, juice, and tea drinks.

USER 22

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Eating, and seeing people I like.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
Eating out at nice restaurants. I probably spend €200–300 per month on this.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Occasionally Vitamin C effervescent tablets.

- What do you like about them?
  They don't taste bad, they're good for the body, and they're convenient.
- And what frustrates you?
  I often forget to take them.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Not really an issue. I don't feel there are many inconveniences for women in this area.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Very little.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, often, I fall for marketing or ads without thinking about practicality. Basically, I've paid a lot of "IQ tax."

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Since I love drinking beverages, I'd design it to look like a drink bottle.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) Either in the morning when I wake up, or at night before bed.
B) If it's really convenient and effective, I would definitely recommend it.

USER 23

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Breakfast.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
My first matcha or coffee. Around €20/month.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, because they're healthy. But I don't like having to take so many different ones instead of just one multi.

- Do you feel like they are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Partly.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  €20.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, because I didn't actively notice an effect.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
A personalized multivitamin, ideally in gummy form.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) On the way to work.
B) Yes, if it tastes good, is reasonably priced, and has cute packaging.

USER 24

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
At night, lying in bed playing on my phone for three hours before sleeping.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much do you spend on them per month?
Yes, bubble tea every week. Around €60 per month.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, magnesium and probiotics.

- What do you like about them?
  The psychological effect, I feel they're useful.
- And what frustrates you?
  I don't really feel any effect.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Some teas feel like they are.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  About €50.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  No.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It mainly has to taste good. If it's like the tasty supplements I had as a child (like chewable Gold Kili), I'd want to keep taking it. If it tastes bad, it feels like a burden.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) In the morning, right after waking up, to start the day.
- B) I'd recommend it if it really works.

USER 25

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Mostly in the evening, when all my to-dos are done and I finally have free time!

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much do you spend per month?
Yes! I like to make myself a coffee or matcha in the morning to feel motivated for the day. Otherwise, I often get a coffee to go between lectures/appointments. I don't know exactly how much I spend (too much!), but with all the fun drinks it's probably €70–90 a month (though I'm really bad at estimating!).

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, vitamins.

- What do you like about them?
  I have a vitamin deficiency, so I need to take them. Otherwise my opinion is pretty neutral.
- And what frustrates you?
  The cost (quite high) and having to remember to take them every day.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  I don't necessarily think so :)
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  About €20.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, usually because I just forgot to take it and then the routine broke down.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It would taste good but not artificial, and give me a healthy feeling (so it should be natural and not overly fake in flavor). It should also be something I enjoy taking so I don't forget, a bit like a "fun drink"? Something you treat yourself to anyway, but that also gives you a good feeling because it's healthy.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In between (during the day).
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, if it tastes good, helps, and isn't too expensive :)

USER 26

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
After finishing work or studying, spending quality and relaxing time with someone I like.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much do you spend on them per month?
Yes. I often light candles and use aromatherapy. Before bed, I use face masks and steam eye masks, give myself a scalp massage, and sometimes do foot baths + meditation. I also spend about €60–80/month on coffee or milk tea.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, fitness supplements (protein powder, creatine), Orthomol vitamins, and fish oil.

- What do you like about them?
  Not really the taste or the price (too expensive), but Orthomol vitamins are very convenient to take. Effectiveness is hard to measure though.
- What frustrates you?
  I question whether they're actually effective. Is there really a difference between cheap and expensive brands? Also, creatine is inconvenient (needs a lot of water).
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Some are, like Orthomol, which has many options.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Around €100.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes. Collagen oral liquid , felt like a scam ("IQ tax"). Oral hair-loss supplements , didn't continue because there were no visible short-term results.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Convenience is most important. The appearance should be simple and elegant. It should make me feel healthier and more energetic, with a comfortable taste.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) Morning would be best.
B) Yes, I would recommend it to my girlfriends if it's effective, because I want them to also feel healthy and beautiful.

USER 27

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most?
I don't really have a typical day. During the semester, I spend 5–6 days a week at my desk or at university. I wake up just in time for the first lecture and go to bed so that I get 8 hours of sleep. I try to be productive until about 6 pm, then I cook, eat, and watch something. In summer, I sometimes go for a short swim in the Eisbach afterwards. On weekends, I try to spend as much time outdoors as possible, but often uni/work gets in the way. During semester breaks, I try to travel a lot to balance it out. The most enjoyable moments are time outdoors during the breaks, and during the semester, the moments between waking up and starting to study.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much do you spend per month?
Sometimes I drink black tea with oat milk in the morning, otherwise no particular drinks or rituals. That costs me about €5/month.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
No.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Honestly? My pillow.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
I try to live as frugally as possible so I can save money for traveling during semester breaks. So honestly, I don't think I would buy it. But if someone gave it to me as a gift, I would probably drink it between lectures to get some energy and feel better.

USER 28

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Food. A bowl of noodles after work/study, a burger or steak after working out, or hotpot/barbecue with friends.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much do you spend per month?
Matcha and aromatherapy. Maybe €30/month (not sure exactly).

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes. Vitamin C, D, E, calcium tablets, curcumin, and açai powder.

- What do you like about them?
  Tablets are convenient and cheap; powders (like açai) taste better and help me drink more water.
- And what frustrates you?
  Tablets are boring, I often forget to take them. Powders are more enjoyable but inconvenient to prepare and clean. Effects aren't very obvious, though I believe long-term there is some benefit.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Not fully. There are women-specific supplements, but some needs are still unmet.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  About €30.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, many. If they're inconvenient to use, I don't keep up with them long-term.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It should be a small drink, about the size of a phone, easy to carry. Maybe in multiple colors, with a hook so it can hang as a bag accessory. It should double as a stylish accessory, something that makes me happy to look at and gives me the feeling that I'm taking care of myself.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) I'd drink it during my morning commute, around lunch, or at coffee breaks.
B) I might recommend it if it tastes good or looks stylish.

USER 29

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
My morning coffee.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much do you spend per month?
A good cappuccino (budget up to €5 per coffee). Otherwise, if I feel like I'm getting sick, I drink tea or hot lemon water. My monthly budget for this is up to €50.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
None, I prefer fresh ingredients.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
A good face mask that cools my skin, wakes me up, and smells nice.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) In the morning before my coffee.
B) Yes, if it's healthy and scientifically proven, I would recommend it.

USER 30

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
My typical day is pretty relaxed. I wake up and eat breakfast right away, then do my to-dos or go to the gym (if I feel like it haha). I also love going for walks, and in the evening I watch movies or series.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much do you spend per month?
Green tea in the morning, otherwise I can't wake up haha. In the evening, peppermint tea or something refreshing/relaxing. I don't spend that much, maybe €5–10? Sometimes I also make smoothies or drink vitamin juices.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Not really, only sometimes magnesium powder (but I often forget). I once tried hair/skin/nail vitamins, but I stopped because they tasted bad and were in pill form, which I didn't like.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It should taste good, maybe fruity like peach. Ideally something drinkable and refreshing that makes me feel awake and good afterwards. I also care about hormone balance, that's really important to me as a woman. I don't want to feel bloated or guilty after drinking it. It should feel healthy and fun, not like a "sin."

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) I'd drink it at work during the day, on the way home, after the gym, or just whenever I feel like it, it should fit naturally into different parts of my life.
B) Yes, I'd recommend it if it had ingredients I know my friends need, like hormone balance support or iron/vitamin boosts. Or if it just tastes really good and I can say: "Hey, this is so good, and it doesn't do any harm."

USER 31

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
Best moment for a busy working girl like me is my morning , the calm before the storm. Also, spending quality time with loved ones and being active outdoors.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
Definitely breakfast. It's my holy grail: Greek yoghurt with blueberries, grapes, passionfruit, puffed quinoa, and almond splits, plus a cup of chocolate-flavored protein soy milk (a habit from childhood).

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Not at the moment, but I've tried Q10, Vitamin D, B12, ginger shots, algae oil.

- What did you like about them?
  They gave me the feeling of doing something good for my health.
- What frustrated you?
  Too expensive, hard to swallow pills daily, algae oil tasted awful.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Not really. There's little awareness of what "women's needs" actually mean. For me, that could be the USP, but it must be explained in depth and backed by science. Otherwise, it's just "fairy dust."

  Because inside the target group of young women, there are definitely the ones hopping on to every trend, as long as it looks cute and will be instagram worthy and used by influencers they will buy it immediately regardless of costs.
  But then you have the ladies who are a bit harder to convince and do their research first before they would buy anything.

- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  At the peak, €30–40/month.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes, I stopped all. I now try to get nutrients from whole foods instead. Supplements can't "change your life" if your lifestyle isn't healthy, they're just additions.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
A citrus shot with yuzu or passionfruit and mint, refreshing, sleek design, not playful. Ideally, different drinks for different cycle phases, since energy levels vary a lot for women.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
What does "glow" or "inner balance" really mean? Can a drink realistically do this, or do you just want me to wish it could? That's the gap: it must be backed by science to build trust. Otherwise, it risks being "just another lifestyle drink."

- A) When in your routine would you use it?
  Definitely mornings.
- B) Would you recommend it to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, if I truly see positive effects on my wellbeing.
- Spending cap: €30–40/month max.

USER 32

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
The most enjoyable moment is resting after exercising; the moment I look forward to most is going to bed.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much do you spend on them?
Breakfast coffee, around €50/month.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes. I take creatine before working out and protein powder after workouts to restore energy.

- What do you like about them?
  I choose flavors I like, so the taste is okay. My main reason for using supplements is to replenish energy.
- And what frustrates you?
  The taste is really just average, honestly.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  I've never thought about this because my intake of protein powder and creatine isn't affected by women's physiological needs.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Around €10–15.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Yes! The main reason was that I didn't like the taste.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
I'm currently drinking something similar to a wellness drink called Lavita, which includes many essential nutrients. Each bottle is 500 ml, you drink 20 ml daily diluted with water. I like the taste and do feel a boost in daily energy. What I'd like to improve is the packaging: ideally sold in small bottles (like a 3-month subscription with 3 boxes, each with 30 small bottles). Flavor could be fruity; the look doesn't matter much. The feeling it gives me is stronger immunity and more energy.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) I'd drink it in the morning and evening.
- B) Yes, if it really improves immunity and energy, I would recommend it.

USER 33

1. Can you tell me a little about yourself and what part of your day feels most meaningful or enjoyable?
Geez, achieving some goals or having deep conversations with friends, when I am playing tennis or cooking my favorite food.

2. Are there any drinks or rituals in your day that make you feel something? Energized, calm, cared for? Tell me about them.
Yoga.

3. Walk me through your wellness routine: do you take supplements, powders, drinks, or other products? Roughly how much do you spend on them each month?
No supplements , I prefer doing sports.

4. Thinking about the products you use, what do you like about them, and what do you wish were different?
N/A.

5. Have you ever stopped using a wellness product? What was the turning point that made you give it up?
I used Anyway before because my mom recommended it, but I usually forgot to take them and I didn't see the impact on me, so I stopped.

6. Do you feel like wellness products today actually reflect women's needs and realities? Why or why not?
(Not answered.)

7. If you could design your perfect daily wellness product, what would it look like, taste like, and make you feel, physically and emotionally?
Physically make me energized and emotionally make me calm. Taste fruity.

8. During your day, when do you most crave an extra boost? Mornings, afternoons, workouts, or late nights?
Morning.

9. When you think of wellness, what matters most to you? Energy and focus, beauty and skin, balance and calm, or a mix of them all?
(Not answered directly, but energy and calm are most important based on Q7 + Q8.)

10. Imagine BossBaby already exists, a wellness brand focusing on women empowerment, creating daily functional shots with clean ingredients like iron, B12, and collagen, designed to support energy, glow, and balance. How do you see something like this naturally fitting into your day? Would it feel more like a private ritual just for you, or something you'd share with friends?
Sounds fancy, I would like to get a free trial :D

USER 34

1. Can you tell me a little about yourself and what part of your day feels most meaningful or enjoyable?
I'm a person with anxiety and depression issues and love to sleep or chill. I enjoy the time before sleeping when I'm lying on the bed and thinking about nothing. Meaningful time is when I do sports or just chill.

2. Are there any drinks or rituals in your day that make you feel something? Energized, calm, cared for? Tell me about them.
I almost only drink water, herbal tea, or fruit tea. But I haven't noticed any function so far.

3. Walk me through your wellness routine: do you take supplements, powders, drinks, or other products? Roughly how much do you spend on them each month?
I did take many supplements, protein powder, protein bars, and drinks when I was actively hitting the gym. I spent around €50–60 per month on them.

4. Thinking about the products you use, what do you like about them, and what do you wish were different?
I like that they are easy to get and to carry with me. They are convenient to take and easy to stock without going bad quickly. I wish they could be less industrial and more organic, without so many artificial elements added.

5. Have you ever stopped using a wellness product? What was the turning point that made you give it up?
I stopped taking creatine daily because I didn't feel it was helpful for my fitness journey. But maybe at that time I was already not very actively doing sports, so I couldn't feel it very well anymore.

6. Do you feel like wellness products today actually reflect women's needs and realities? Why or why not?
I think some do help women have balanced health or feel more energized or relaxed. But many people get them just because of trends or marketing, even if their bodies don't need that much. I think simple vitamins or minerals are too commercialized, and we don't really need so much. Products like artificial meal powders or slimming powders may reflect women's needs nowadays, but they are not always healthy or helpful.

7. If you could design your perfect daily wellness product, what would it look like, taste like, and make you feel, physically and emotionally?
It should be easy and quick to take (orally or nasally), better as a spray or sugar-free candy. It should bring a calming effect, make my body relaxed, and taste like vanilla (or have no strong artificial taste at all).

8. During your day, when do you most crave an extra boost? Mornings, afternoons, workouts, or late nights?
After workouts (protein products) and before sleeping (vitamin, collagen supplements, herbal tea, or melatonin depending on sleep).

9. When you think of wellness, what matters most to you? Energy and focus, beauty and skin, balance and calm, or a mix of them all?
Energy and focus, balance and calm.

10. Imagine BossBaby already exists, a wellness brand focusing on women empowerment, creating daily functional shots with clean ingredients like iron, B12, and collagen, designed to support energy, glow, and balance. How do you see something like this naturally fitting into your day?
Definitely all I want.

USER 35

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
I look forward to my first coffee, to Pilates and playing guitar. Also to meeting friends. If I have uni, I enjoy seeing my classmates.

2. Are there any drinks or rituals in your day that make you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good?
The first thing I do is drink a glass of water. After that, I look forward to my iced coffee latte with oat milk , that makes me feel good. In the afternoon, if I'm in the city, I often have a coffee or matcha latte at a café.

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Not really. I just bought a test packet of Hydration Helper (electrolytes) for the first time.

- What do you like about them?
  Haven't tried it yet.
- What frustrates you?
  (Not answered.)
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  I don't think so, from what I see. They are usually general, or gym/sports drinks.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  First time now, around €30.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  No.

4. If you could design your perfect daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, look, and most importantly, make you feel?
Something that helps me stay hydrated. I drink too little water. It could taste like passionfruit, grapefruit, or maybe cucumber. Not too sweet. It shouldn't look too artificial.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using it?
  In the morning after my first glass of water. After sports, or during lunch break. Also in between classes.
- B) Would you recommend it to your friends? Why or why not?
  Yes! If it helps me, I would recommend it.

6. How much do you spend per month on small drink rituals?
With coffee, at least around €40 , often more.

USER 36

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
The best moment is usually when I can find some peace outside in nature, or when I make or buy something delicious to eat or drink and enjoy it in peace.

2. Are there any drinks or rituals in your day that make you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good?
Yes, definitely. As I said, eating or drinking something calmly always relaxes me. I like drinking coffee, matcha, or bubble tea. Coffee basically at any time, matcha and bubble tea more as afternoon/evening snacks or desserts. I'd say I spend €25–40 a month on these, depending on how much I'm out. At home, I don't drink them , only when I'm outside or on the go.

3. Walk me through your wellness routine: do you take supplements, powders, drinks, or other products? Roughly how much do you spend on them each month?
Not at the moment. I haven't noticed products being specifically designed for women. Currently, I don't spend money on this anymore. I used to drink a vitamin drink called La Vita, but it was too expensive and I didn't like the taste. It felt like a chore, not something enjoyable. I also had to stir it into a glass, which made it inconvenient to take along, since I always needed an extra bottle.

4. If you could design your perfect daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, look, and make you feel?
It should be something that doesn't require preparation, tastes good and not "too healthy," so it doesn't feel like a chore. It should give me a cozy, pleasant feeling, be easy to digest even on an empty stomach, and feel like a treat rather than medicine.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance. Where in your day could you see yourself using it? Would you recommend it? Why or why not?
I could see it as a snack in between, something I can also take with me when I'm out. I would recommend it , but only if it's not too expensive, since many people in my circle would only buy something like this if it's affordable.

USER 37

1. Can you tell me a little about yourself and what part of your day feels most meaningful or enjoyable?
I'm Anasthasia, 23, currently having a quite hectic lifestyle with a 9-5 job, college, and a part-time job. But I enjoy relaxing time and traveling as well. I enjoy my weekends the most when I have time for myself. My most productive time of the day is either after getting ready for the day and before lunch, or late afternoon because I feel most focused then.

2. Are there any drinks or rituals in your day that make you feel something? Energized, calm, cared for? Tell me about them.
I actually enjoy cooking for myself, that's when I feel most immersed. Also, tea before bed and reading a few pages of my book is a ritual that makes me calm.

3. Walk me through your wellness routine: do you take supplements, powders, drinks, or other products? Roughly how much do you spend on them each month?
I take some multivitamin, multimineral, and phytonutrient food supplement called Double X from Nutrilite, enriched with 22 plants and phytonutrients from 5 color groups that provide scientifically proven daily support. I also take women's supplements that support the period cycle and low energy during that time. Otherwise, I'll take other supplements if I feel unwell. Roughly €50–60 a month.

4. Thinking about the products you use, what do you like about them, and what do you wish were different?
I like that they have multiple functionalities and I really feel the benefits with regular use. I wish they were easier to get in Germany (the Nutrilite DoubleX) and not so expensive.

5. Have you ever stopped using a wellness product? What was the turning point that made you give it up?
Not completely, but sometimes I forget to take them for a few days. No exact reason, just forgetting.

6. Do you feel like wellness products today actually reflect women's needs and realities? Why or why not?
I think there are many wellness products depending on your needs and budget. It takes time to make them part of a routine. Especially for women, I think now it's starting to grow more, and that's a good initiative to reflect women's needs.

7. If you could design your perfect daily wellness product, what would it look like, taste like, and make you feel, physically and emotionally?
It needs to be handy, easy to take/prepare, and have a real effect. Transparent communication of ingredients and side effects is important. I imagine a small sachet you can take everywhere, already portioned. It could be liquid or solid, but it should also be consumable without water. It should make me feel fit, comfortable, and ready to start the day.

8. During your day, when do you most crave an extra boost? Mornings, afternoons, workouts, or late nights?
Definitely mornings.

9. When you think of wellness, what matters most to you? Energy and focus, beauty and skin, balance and calm, or a mix of them all?
It would be best to have a mix of all, but personally, I value energy and focus the most.

10. Imagine BossBaby already exists, a wellness brand focusing on women empowerment, creating daily functional shots with clean ingredients like iron, B12, and collagen, designed to support energy, glow, and balance. How do you see something like this naturally fitting into your day? Would it feel more like a private ritual just for you, or something you'd share with friends?
I would see it as an extra boost for the day. I might only take it if I need the boost, because as a woman, hormones play an important role and energy levels change from day to day.

USER 38

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
I'm happiest when I have nothing to worry about , when I can take a walk, feel healthy, and be at peace.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
Morning exercise after waking up.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, vitamins.

- What do you like about them?
  I hope they work.
- And what frustrates you?
  I don't think they're always effective.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  There are many products marketed for women, but often their functions are not very good.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  I bought vitamins, but since I wasn't sure they worked, I sometimes didn't use them. If I don't have symptoms, I don't feel the need to buy.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like?
If it contained all vitamins in one, I'd use it. Pills are troublesome, you have to swallow them with water. Drinks would be a better experience.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
A) I'd drink it after meals.
B) Of course I'd recommend it, and I hope it could be available in supermarkets so it's convenient to buy.

USER 39

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
After work, when I can sit down and have dinner , that's the part I enjoy most.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
In the morning, I usually make myself a latte , I prepare it in a small pot and take it with me to work. It puts me in a good mood and makes me feel better starting the day.
Sometimes, in the evenings, I'll drink a caffeine-free, sugar-free tea before bed, something herbal that helps me relax.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, I take multivitamins and protein powder. It makes me feel healthier.

- What do you like about them?
  They're healthy and seem designed for women, so I feel like they're helpful.
- And what frustrates you?
  The capsules are too big and hard to swallow, and I often forget to take them.
- How much do you spend per month?
  Not much. I've probably only taken 20–30 capsules total in the past year.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it?
  Yes, I bought collagen tablets before, but they were also too big and annoying to swallow. I got lazy and stopped taking them.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like?
I'd like something caffeine-free, sugar-free, easy to drink before bed, and not in a big capsule. It should feel light and relaxing.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.
(Not fully answered, but context suggests: She'd want it to be convenient, drinkable, not capsule-based, and potentially part of either her morning latte ritual or evening tea ritual.)

USER 40

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most?
After work, after taking a shower, lying down to watch dramas or read.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
Morning coffee to wake up (I buy Tchibo capsules).
Est. 30-40 EUR/month

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes , multivitamins, magnesium, protein powder, collagen.

- What do you like about them?
  Pills are convenient.
- And what frustrates you?
  It takes effort to combine them myself.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  I don't know. But the designs I've found aren't my style.
- On average, how much do you spend per month on them?
  Around €60.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? If so, why?
  Protein powder. The tubs are so huge, and finishing them feels like a relief rather than enjoyment.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It should taste good, with natural fruity flavor, not artificial flavorings.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) I'd drink it either in the morning or before bed.
- B) Yes, I'd recommend it , it could even be a social topic to share.

USER 41

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
In the evening, when everything is done and I have a short moment just for myself – to relax and do a bit of self-care. ✨

2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
Coffee in the morning and tea in the evening – they give me energy and calm.

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Sometimes zinc for skin/pimples.

• What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)
The taste is okay, and it feels like I'm doing something good for my skin.

• What frustrates you?
They're often too expensive and not really designed for women.

• Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
Not really.

• How much do you spend per month on them?
Maximum €20 per month.

• Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
Yes, I've stopped using some because they didn't work or were too expensive.

4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Something for clear skin and against pimples. Ideally one product that covers multiple needs, so you don't have to take several pills. It should taste good.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.
A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
In the morning.
B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
If it really works, I'd definitely recommend it to my friends.

USER 42

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
The most enjoyable moment I look forward to is starting my day in a calm and peaceful way.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day?
Throughout the day I get my daily matcha that helps me stay awake and I can continue on with my day like normal.
150€ per month

Q3. Do you feel like wellness products today actually reflect women's needs and realities? Why or why not?
Most products I see are clearly designed and made for everybody, such as energy drinks for example.

Q4. If you could design your perfect daily wellness product, what would it look like, taste like, and make you feel, physically and emotionally?
It would definitely be something refreshing and not too sweet. It would give the feeling that you can be relaxed and at ease.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance. Would you recommend it to friends? Why or why not?
If something like this existed, I would definitely recommend it to my friends, especially if it's designed specifically for women.

USER 43

Q1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you, or the part you look forward to the most?
My most enjoyable moment of the day is my slow mornings. I love to wake up to the nature around me, to grab my blanket and head out to the orangerie and meditate and then make my breakfast. To have my cup of tea, and sip it feeling satisfied with myself. Ready to continue with my day.

Q2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? How much money do you spend on this?
My teas during the day. One in the morning, and one in the afternoon. I just buy a 500g bag of loose tea leaves at the local tea shop. Lasts me a good month. I forgot how much I pay for it, I will need to get back to you on it.

Q3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
I like to drink Vitamin Well sometimes. I also started drinking a shot of Proviva in the mornings to help support my gut biome.

- What do you like about them?
  I like their marketing, elegant and simple. Great quality taste and benefits. I feel energized and good about taking care of myself. Like a little bit of self-love.
- What frustrates you?
  Nothing in particular.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Not really, they are more for general population benefits.
- How much do you spend per month on them?
  About €10 a month.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  Yes, but mostly because I changed my habits for the better.

Q4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
It would be slick and elegant in design, feminine for sure, rich in nutrients and natural flavors, floral or fruity. Making me feel energized, but in a non-jittery way. So no caffeine.

Q5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, glow, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  Yes :) (implying morning routine).
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  I would like to try it myself first, but I would recommend it if I believe in it and understand its benefits. I want all my girlies to benefit from good stuff!

USER 44

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
Get up, do sports/stretching, breakfast, then uni or work. Afternoon working, evening training. Most enjoyable: evening sports or morning coffee.

2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
First coffee in the morning, and a "fun drink" in the afternoon (Cola Zero, Mate, Schorle, …). About €20–25/month.

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes.

- What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)
  The effect, or at least the feeling that you're doing something good for your body.
- What frustrates you?
  Price.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Some yes, some no.
- How much do you spend per month on them?
  About €10–15/month.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  Yes, when it didn't deliver what was "promised."

4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Protein powder that also covers the main minerals (magnesium, iron, zinc, vitamin C). Fruity but not too sweet. Sleek, aesthetic design. Should motivate you to take it daily.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  With breakfast.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Depends on effectiveness, price-performance, and ingredients.

USER 45

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
I wake up around 7am, ready by 8:30–9am, coffee and breakfast, sightseeing, take a nap, go out or stay in, go to bed around midnight. The most enjoyable moment is fresh air in the morning with hot coffee.

2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
Definitely the first coffee in the morning gives me energy! Around €100 or less.

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, only magnesium powder.

- What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)?
  Taste is okay, easy to bring around since it comes in a sachet.
- What frustrates you?
  N/A.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Not really.
- How much do you spend per month on them?
  €10.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  Multivitamin supplements , just didn't feel much effectiveness.

4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
I'd make something that gives you an energy boost, comes in sachets, with a peachy-mango-tropical flavor.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  I'd like to have it first thing in the morning if it gives me energy! If it's calming, I'd like to have it just before bed.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  If it works and I feel a difference, I'd love to recommend it! Good products always spread quickly by word of mouth.

USER 46

1 Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
Work → eat/game → chill/at home work → eat → sleep. My favorite part is probably right after work or right before sleeping.

2 Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
Matcha coffee or tea that I can sip on throughout the day; mainly tea though. I probably spend at least $72 (~€67) per month on it.

3 Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
No, unless you count coffee/matcha/tea.

- What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)
  I like the taste.
- What frustrates you?
  The cost would frustrate me if it's too high.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Some are designed with women's needs, while others aren't.
- How much do you spend per month on them?
  Nothing besides the ~$72 on tea/matcha/coffee.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  If it tastes bad, I wouldn't use it much.

4 If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Something super clean but also cute, that gives me a little dopamine rush. It would make me feel happy. Taste: sweet but not too sweet, ideally adjustable if DIY. Texture: not sandy. Format: maybe a gummy or mint , fun, colorful, reusable container, candy-brand vibe.

5 Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  In the morning, during work, or after work , as long as it's easy.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Only if it tastes good, feels effective, and is affordable/worth it.

USER 47

1 Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
If I stay at home, I look forward to going out with friends or my partner. If I've been out all day, I look forward to taking a shower and lying in bed playing on my phone.

2 Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
Not really, I don't need these kinds of small rituals. But if I had to name one, I'd say "getting dressed up." Once I've dressed up, I feel more energized and in a better mood.

3 Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, quite a few. I take Vitamin C every day, especially when I'm tired, it helps prevent getting sick! I also take inositol because I have PCOS. Recently, I've also been taking Augen (eye supplement) because my eyes sometimes feel uncomfortable.

- What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)
  The psychological effect is important! But for Vitamin C, I really feel like it helps me fight off illness.
- What frustrates you?
  Some require taking three capsules a day, it's really hard to stick to that.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Somewhat. With consumerism and the wellness trend booming, women are definitely the main target group haha.
- How much do you spend per month on them?
  Not much, maybe under €10. Supplements are pretty cheap in Germany.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  Yes, sometimes I finished one and didn't repurchase. No big reason, it's just that with supplements you don't feel obvious effects, so I wanted to try different ones. But Vitamin C I'll probably keep taking.

4 If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Honestly, I think capsules are already great. With drinks, not everyone likes them, and tastes vary. Drinks also expire faster, so capsules feel more practical.

5 Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  At breakfast.

- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  If I could really see tangible results, I'd definitely recommend it.

USER 48

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
I usually look forward to mealtimes. Another moment I really enjoy is after working or studying for a long time, finally being able to lie in bed after showering feels really good. Also, if I have some free time, I like picking up a book and reading. That process is something I enjoy a lot as well.

2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
I really like going for walks, especially when my eyes get tired from sitting for too long, or when I have enough energy and the weather is good. If the weather allows, I sometimes jog. As for drinks, I don't usually drink coffee, but I love tea , I have all kinds of teas: fruit teas, herbal teas, ginger tea when I feel cold. I drink a lot of tea every day. Maybe I spend around €10 per month, plus some extra on special teas like menstrual teas, which cost a few euros more.

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Not really regularly. I know women often lack iron if they don't eat much meat or after childbirth, so I've supplemented with iron before, but not consistently. I've also taken some vitamins, but I mostly try to eat vegetables and balance my diet. So, I wouldn't say I spend much on supplements , maybe less than €10 per month.

- What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)?
  I felt iron supplements really helped when I was very tired, they gave me energy.
- What frustrates you?
  Iron supplements prescribed by doctors sometimes upset my stomach, or I couldn't eat within two hours of taking them, which was inconvenient. I also didn't like some with too much calcium, since they interfered with absorption. That was frustrating.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Somewhat. For example, menstrual teas are clearly targeted at women. But in general, I don't feel most products are designed specifically for women. Many things I buy, men could use too.
- How much do you spend per month on them?
  Very little, maybe €10 on supplements, plus €10–15 on teas, especially menstrual teas. Total maybe €20–25 per month.
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  Yes, some supplements I stopped once I felt better or wanted to try something else. I've also bought skincare products but didn't continue because I wasn't satisfied or just wanted to try different ones.

4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?

I would want something convenient , unlike tea that needs hot water. A product I can carry easily and drink anywhere. I'd prefer a light, natural flavor, not too sweet, not bitter, not artificial. Something that helps me feel calm and relaxed, reduces stress, and boosts my energy.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  Between meals, when I'm feeling a bit tired or need a small boost. For example, if I eat three meals normally, I'd use this in between as a healthy snack replacement.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, definitely. It would be a good conversation topic, and if I saw results, I'd share it. Many of my friends have similar needs , they feel tired, want to relax, or want to feel more beautiful and youthful. If it works, I'd recommend it for sure.

USER 49

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
Coming home in the evening and winding down from the hustle of the day. Whether it's with a good series, a walk, or time with my boyfriend (Alex) ✨

2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
Not really a fixed ritual, but in warmer months I tend to drink coffee and in colder months tea. If I'm especially tired, I'll go for mate (or coffee). What I like about all three is that their base ingredients are plant-based and natural, though unfortunately some of them are still quite heavily processed. Price-wise, I spend around €17 a month on drinks. Most of the time I prepare them myself at home ☺

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?

- What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)?
  No, I don't take any, even though I'd be interested. Many supplements only work if you actually have a deficiency, and I don't know if or which one I have. That's why I don't want to spend money unnecessarily.

4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
The taste would probably be fruity and not too sweet. I really don't like overly sweet drinks (pomegranate comes to mind 😂). The look would probably be pastel, maybe a gradient from pink to rose to orange, similar to the aura trend 💗. The feeling should be soothing: you just know the drink isn't loaded with artificial additives, so you don't feel guilty while drinking it 😌.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  Everywhere and anytime; simply as something tasty in between.
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Depending on the taste, yes. But just based on the info so far, definitely! 🥰

USER 50

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
I usually wake up, do yoga or eat breakfast directly, then work until lunch. After that, I either keep working or meet friends in the afternoon. In the evening, I relax, maybe watch something on my iPad or phone, and then go to bed. Right now, what I enjoy most is meeting people and spending time with them.

2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
I love drinking matcha. Sometimes I'll have one in the morning, sometimes in the afternoon. Occasionally I drink coffee too, but not that often. I'd say I spend around €30–50 per month on drinks.

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
No, I don't take any supplements.

• What do you like about them?
N/A

• What frustrates you?
N/A

• Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
Not really, I don't feel like I need wellness products either. I grew up in a Chinese household, if something is missing, I'll just make a traditional Chinese drink, and that feels enough for me.

• How much do you spend per month on them?
N/A

• Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
Not really with wellness products, maybe just general skincare from time to time.

4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
I'm not sure I need one, but if it existed it should be tasty, not too expensive, maybe like matcha or tea. It should give me a good feeling without being something artificial.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.

• A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
I could imagine it replacing matcha sometimes, maybe in the afternoon.

• B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
Only if it tastes good and is affordable. If it's too expensive, I wouldn't. But if the price is fair and it works, I'd recommend it.

USER 51

1. Tell me a bit about your typical day. What's usually the most enjoyable moment for you or the part you look forward to the most? ☺
After work when I get home: showering, removing makeup, and doing skincare.

2. Do you have any small rituals, drinks, or habits that help you feel energized, relaxed, or just generally good during the day? (For example: your first coffee, an evening tea, a smoothie, etc.). How much money do you spend per month on this?
Skincare, opening blind boxes. Around €200 per month.

3. Are you currently taking any supplements like vitamins, powders, or functional drinks?
Yes, marine collagen, milk thistle (liver support), omega 3-6-9, esterified vitamin C.

- What do you like about them? (e.g., taste, price, effort, effects…)
  Marine collagen: plumps the skin; milk thistle: essential for late nights; omega 3-6-9: supports eye health; esterified vitamin C: absorbs better than regular vitamin C, whitening + immunity boost.
- What frustrates you?
  Nothing.
- Do you feel like the products you use or see are designed with women's needs in mind?
  Yes.
- How much do you spend per month on them?
  Around €50 (not fixed, since sometimes I come across new products, prices vary).
- Have you ever bought something but stopped using it? Why?
  Q10, an energy-support supplement. It wasn't very effective for my body.

4. If you could design your own daily wellness product, what would it be like? How would it taste, how would it look, and most importantly, what feeling would it give you?
Pink minimalist packaging, portable (no leakage issues). Not too sweet, not astringent, and not with the unpleasant taste of traditional supplements (like iron). Function-wise, it should give an instant energy boost but not rely on high caffeine (caffeine makes me anxious). Ideally, it would include L-theanine and theobromine, similar to high-quality matcha.

5. Now imagine BossBaby already exists: A small, tasty daily shot with high-quality ingredients, designed especially for women, for more energy, better skin, and inner balance.

- A) Where in your daily routine could you see yourself using something like this?
  After breakfast / during lunch break at work (I always feel very sleepy after lunch).
- B) Would this be something you'd recommend to friends? Why or why not?
  Yes, because many of my friends don't actively put effort into maintaining their health. Most of them find it troublesome. If there's a convenient, ready-to-drink, and effective product like this, I'd definitely recommend it.

BossBaby User Insights Matrix

User	Most Enjoyable Moment	Rituals / Habits	Supplement Use	Likes	Frustrations	Ideal Product	Timing	Sharing Mindset
Ning (48)	Morning coffee ritual	Coffee; protein drinks post-workout	Yes: protein powder	Refreshing sour-sweet flavors, lemon, happiness	None mentioned	Sweet-sour, recyclable glass bottle, gives joy	Morning / evening	Yes, if improves skin & happiness
Luisa	Morning tea + skincare	Green tea w/ honey, lemon water, music	Not mentioned	Sweet taste, beauty + energy	N/A	Sweet, pink, berry/coconut flavor, beauty + energy	Morning	Yes, would recommend/sell
User A	After work, relaxing on phone	Morning coffee	No (tried before)	N/A	Past products had no effect, stopped	“Healthy milk tea,” must taste good	Morning	Yes, only if effective
User B	Early-morning reading or	Coffee, fruit, naps, incen	Yes: Vit D, Omega-3, Vit C	Grapefruit effervescent taste,	Omega-3 too big, hard to swallow	Tasty, certified safe	Afternoon	Only after trying afternoon coffee	se, lofi	tabs, gummies	affordable

User C	Morning coffee + bathroom	Coffee	Yes: fish oil, vitamins, Ca-Mg complex	Effectiveness	Pills boring, taste fatigue	Light taste, all-in-one, like salted water	After coffee	Yes, if effective
User D	After work	Breakfast	No	N/A	Dislikes supplements in general	Mouth spray, fruity, simple & elegant	Morning or bedtime	Yes, “good things are shared”
User E	Coffee	Coffee + bakery + buying flowers	No	N/A	Doesn’t see reason for supplements, can’t stick	Simple, green, fresh, appetite control	Morning	Yes, if good
User F	Lying in clean bed before sleep	Morning tea	Sometimes (eye vitamins)	Psychological sense of eye protection	Forgetfulness, inconsistent	Time-saving, healthy, refreshing (not sweet)	Morning, with breakfast	Yes, esp. for busy freelancers
User G	After work	Evening tea	Yes: Ashwagandha	Functional effect (stress, sleep)	Taste unpleasant, pills boring	Portable, fruity/milk-tea flavor, enjoyabl	Morning	Yes

						e & healthy
User H (Night Owl)	Sunset / night creativity	Weekly carrot juice, Coke for focus, tidying w/ music	Yes: Stress softgels	Effectiveness, non-prescription stress relief	Pill swallowing fear, forgetting, trends not sustainable	Carrot/carrot-apple juice wellness shot, treat-like	After work as evening ritual	Yes, wants to share w/ friends

---

Emerging Clusters / Archetypes

1. The Ritual Seekers (Ning, Luisa, User A, User E)
   - Anchor their wellness in daily rituals (coffee, tea, bakery, skincare).
   - Taste and pleasure of ritual are more important than raw functionality.
   - Want products that feel like a natural, enjoyable extension of existing habits.
2. The Functional Minimalists (User B, User C, User G)
   - Already use supplements but dislike pills and complexity.
   - Want all-in-one, effective, convenient formats with light, non-intrusive flavors.
   - Effectiveness is key: they'll only share if they feel real results. NEEDS SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE
3. The Fresh & Social Sharers (User D, Luisa, User G)
   - Care about design (simple, elegant, fruity, refreshing).
   - Motivated to share good products socially ("good things should be shared").
   - Want easy-to-carry formats, light tastes, and trustworthiness.
4. The Practical Optimizers (User F, User H)
   - Time-poor, efficiency-driven, busy with creative/professional work.
   - Want wellness to be both rewarding and functional (energy, focus, mood).
   - Skeptical of hype; emphasize consistency, practicality, and health benefits.

Key Insights for BossBaby

- Taste & Ritual: Almost every user anchors wellness to a drink ritual (coffee, tea, juice). The product should feel like a treat, not medicine.
- Format & Convenience: Pill fatigue is universal. Preferred formats: drinks, shots, sprays , easy, light, portable.

- Consistency Barrier: Forgetfulness and boredom cause drop-off. Solutions: built-in cues, enjoyable rituals, social sharing to sustain habits.
- Design & Identity: Users appreciate simple, elegant, eco-friendly design that signals trust and lifestyle fit.
- Sharing Potential: Many participants are eager to recommend to friends , but only if the product works and feels enjoyable.

Persona 1: The Morning Ritualist

- Age: 27
- Location: Berlin
- Lifestyle: Young professional, structured, enjoys routines.
- Rituals: Morning coffee or matcha, skincare routine, sometimes juice. The first drink of the day is sacred.
- Frustrations with supplements: Pills feel like medicine, forgets to take them, doesn't enjoy the process.
- Wants: A refreshing, fruity boost that feels natural and indulgent , not clinical.
- BossBaby fit: Fits seamlessly into her morning ritual as a stylish, tasty, health-boosting shot.
- Quote: "If it tastes good and makes me happy, I'll look forward to it every morning , or when I need a little pick-me-up."
  "If it tastes good and feels like part of my morning ritual, I'll never skip it."

Persona 2: The Afternoon Slump Fighter

- Age: 31
- Location: Copenhagen
- Lifestyle: Busy office worker, energy crashes after lunch.
- Rituals: Relies on Coke, coffee, or sweets around 3pm.
- Frustrations with supplements: Hard to see results, pills are boring or inconvenient, skeptical about real impact.
- Wants: A fun, convenient pick-me-up that's healthier than soda or sugary coffee drinks.
- BossBaby fit: Market BossBaby as the healthy afternoon recharge , a treat that delivers focus + freshness.

- Quote: “At 3pm I need a boost , but I don’t want another coffee or candy bar.”
  “I want something healthier than Coke, but just as rewarding , a little daily treat to spark my creativity and keep me going.”

Persona 3: The Lifestyle Explorer

- Age: 25
- Location: Munich
- Lifestyle: Social, trend-conscious, heavy Instagram/TikTok user. Loves trying new drinks like kombucha, bubble tea.
- Rituals: Morning matcha, skincare, occasional “fun” juices.
- Frustrations with supplements: Forgets to take pills, often influenced by ads, loses interest if the product isn’t tasty or stylish.
- Wants: Cute design, fun flavors, and something she can share with friends , a product that feels like part of her lifestyle, not medicine.
- BossBaby fit: BossBaby = functional beauty + social fun, positioned as a stylish wellness accessory.
- Quote: “If it looks cute, tastes good, and feels good , I’ll try it, and if it works, I’ll stick with it.”
  “If it’s fresh, fun, and stylish, I’ll happily tell my friends , good things are meant to be shared.”

Persona 4: The Skeptical Achiever

- Age: 29
- Location: Zurich
- Lifestyle: Health-conscious, critical thinker, reads labels and wants results.
- Rituals: Lemon water, tea, sometimes functional powders.
- Frustrations with supplements: Overpriced, no visible effects, “marketing fluff” without proof.
- Wants: Science-backed, effective products with transparent value , premium but not gimmicky.
- BossBaby fit: Market BossBaby as evidence-based wellness for women, with clear proof and benefits.
- Quote: “Don’t sell me fairy dust , show me proof, and I’ll be a loyal customer.”
  “Just give me one thing that works , I don’t want a shelf full of half-used bottles, and I need to know it’s proven.”

1. Daily Rituals are Anchors
Morning is prime time. Most participants highlighted morning rituals (coffee, matcha, tea, juice, “first drink of the day”) as their anchor.
Evenings matter too. Many also named post-work relaxation (lying in bed, skincare, winding down with tea or Netflix) as their most enjoyable time.
Some also mentioned the afternoon slump as a critical moment, often reaching for coffee, Coke, or snacks to regain focus.
Implication: BossBaby fits best into morning or evening rituals , and can also serve as an afternoon reset when women crave an extra boost.

2. Taste is Non-Negotiable
Almost every participant emphasized that wellness products must taste good to stick.
Preferences lean toward:

- Refreshing, fruity, sour-sweet (lemon, berry, grape, iced tea, coconut).
- Not too artificial , “should taste natural, not fake.”
- Fun formats like gummies, chewables, or iced-drink style.
  Implication: Taste is the gateway. Without it, even proven health benefits won’t drive consistency.

3. Supplements = Chore, Not Fun
Many participants buy supplements but then:

- Forget to take them.
- Stop because they don’t feel results.
- Get turned off by pills being “too big, hard to swallow, tasteless, like medicine.”
  People love powders, shots, and fun drinks because they feel less like work.
  Implication: BossBaby should position itself as “wellness that feels like a treat, not a task.”

4. Skepticism + Demand for Proof
Several participants mentioned frustration with “no noticeable effect.”
Some (e.g., User H) explicitly demand scientific proof or peer-reviewed evidence.
Others (e.g., User M) said clearer price-per-use communication would motivate purchase.
Implication: Transparency (scientific backing + value breakdown) is essential to win trust.

5. Social Sharing as a Motivator
Many would recommend BossBaby to friends , but only if:

- It tastes good.
- It feels effective.
- Packaging/design is stylish or “cute.”
  Sharing wellness is seen as a bonding activity (“good sisters get beautiful together”).
  Implication: BossBaby can grow via word of mouth if it’s fun, effective, and aesthetic.

6. Women Want Tailored Solutions
Some feel products aren't really designed for women (e.g., too masculine, not addressing hormones or energy balance).
Others like that they see more female-specific products but still feel fragmented (too many single-function supplements).
Implication: Position BossBaby clearly as "made for women, all-in-one support" , addressing beauty + balance + performance.

7. Price Sensitivity + Willingness to Spend Reported spends:

- Supplements: Most spend €10–40/month. A few (用户M) spend much more (~€200/month on drinks).
- Drinks/"fun beverages": €30–90/month typical, up to €200–300 for heavy users. People are willing to spend more on drinks than supplements because drinks feel enjoyable, social, and integrated into life.
  Implication: BossBaby should frame itself as a premium fun-drink alternative to milk tea/juice rather than "just another supplement."

8. Design & Packaging Matter
Many mentioned they want something that:

- Looks "pretty / elegant / minimalist / cute."
- Is portable and convenient (carton with straw, small shot bottle, not a clunky pill box).
- Fits the aesthetics of lifestyle products rather than medicine.
  Implication: Packaging = part of the ritual. If it looks fun and stylish, users will want to be seen with it.

9. Emotional Layer
Products aren't just functional , they give feelings:

- Refreshing, light, clean start (lemon water, detox drinks).
- Comfort & nostalgia (childhood chewable vitamins, fun gummies).
- Luxury & lifestyle (pretty bottles, café-style iced drinks).
  Implication: BossBaby should sell a feeling as much as a function , e.g., "your fresh start in a bottle."

🔑 Summary

Across all interviews, women consistently want wellness that feels like joy, not obligation.

- Rituals (morning coffee/matcha/juice, evening relaxation, and afternoon pick-me-ups) are the key entry points.
- Taste + aesthetics are the deal-breakers.
- Proof & effectiveness are required for loyalty.
- Social sharing + fun design amplify adoption.

- BossBaby’s sweet spot: the bridge between functional supplements and fun drinks , tasty, stylish, women-focused shots that deliver visible benefits while feeling like a lifestyle treat.